It might be remembered in the conclusion this article, a copy of which is enclosed, and giving the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy as to the necessity of expediting the removal of these and particularly if there has been a policy of consideration in the Department of State to remove the missiles from Turkey and Italy, and further, whether the Committee would initiate a planning paper concerning the proposed removal of these missiles has been prepared.

As you know, the Joint Committee has been particularly interested in the removal of the missiles from Turkey, Italy, and Greece. The Committee has been particularly interested in the removal of the missiles from Turkey, Italy, and Greece. The Committee has been particularly interested in the removal of the missiles from Turkey, Italy, and Greece.

Thank you for your assistance in this matter. An article by Dave Pearson, dated December 18, 1962, in the Washington Post outlines what is proposed for the State and Defense Department policy decisions concerning the removal of the missiles from Turkey, England and Italy. Included in this article is a statement:

John D. Conway

"The Secretary, his [State] Department, and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy have agreed with our Italian and Turkish allies that our allies have agreed to the withdrawal of the missiles in Cuba, and then only within the framework of overall disarmament to be discussed in the United Nations ...

"Actually a letter was drafted by Elizabeth Thompson, former Ambassador to Moscow along these lines... but the letter was never sent."

The article concluded with the following statement:

"There is interesting information in that six more missiles are already in the process of removal from England and Italy. The Japanese missiles will be removed from Italy and Turkey sometime next year -- unless they are held up by the American negotiating process. Sen. Mansfield is still opposed, but the Joint Chiefs of Staff are now supporting him."

It could be appreciated if you would review this article, and which it contains, and advise the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, as to whether or not the statement of the Joint Committee is particularly in that the same is a policy recommendation to the Department of Defense, and a recommendation of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy and the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy.
